LOVE THY NEIGHBOUR

How to nurture interconnectedness
within community

1 Utilize Art as a Tool

How we view the world and attribute value to everything that surrounds us, is taught. Whether we see difference as diversity or danger is a by-product of what has been nurtured in us through media, education and relationships.

Using art as a medium to thoughtfully communicate the importance of mutuality, generosity, and kindness is a tool we should utilize across all ages and forms of communication.

2 Treat Everyone like a Neighbour

In a time riddled with division and isolation, it is important that we get back to the basics and reinstate the golden rule to “Love thy neighbour,” understanding that everyone and everything is our neighbour.

By internalizing this ethos, we can begin to mend the fractures of our fragmented society, fostering a collective sense of responsibility, unity, and compassion that transcends geographical boundaries.

In a world yearning for connection and unity, rekindling the spirit of loving our neighbour, whomever and whatever that neighbour may be, serves as a powerful catalyst for healing and positive change.

3 Commitment to Love

When our commitment to love trumps our commitment to being right, our interactions with each other are coloured with curiosity and celebration.

As we nurture the harmonious vibrations of love in our thoughts, feelings and actions, collaboration, creativity and connection become more concentrated. When love is the energy that governs our bodies, we are able to show up to life light and luminous. For love's yoke is easy and her burden is light.

Before we can paint these qualities in their most vibrant form, they must first live in our own hearts. We must personally know how deeply satisfying the fruits of her crop taste.
